EXPLANATION.

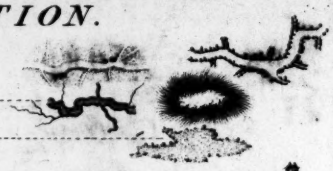
Open & Close Roads with Houses on D.°

Rivers & Hills

Heaths & Commons



Gentlemens Seats

Lines which shew the point of sight from whence the Houses are seen

Houses seen from the road and beyond the limits of the Scale are placed between the partition lines, thus

Houses which are connected, or situate within a Town, are not shewn from the impossibility of describing them with precision.

The different routes are given on the general Map with reference figures annexed corresponding with the columns where each Road is described.

ADVERTISEMENT.

Solicited by many Gentlemen to a distinct publication of the high Roads round London, the proprietor has been induced to undertake this work, with the hope that it will convey to the traveller, that kind of information which will give pleasure to his peregrinations; pleased with the numberless Villas which so often attract his attention, his enquiry is naturally directed to whom do they belong, to explain which, has been a principal object of the present publication, by laying down all those houses likely to attract attention with the name of the possessor, which are situate on, or within sight of the Road, (however distant) to which the eye is directed when in particular situations, by a line drawn from the spot from whence it is seen, and which the proprietor flatters himself will be allowed a novel as well as useful improvement.

The turnpike Gates also; a subject so often complained of from the incivility as well as imposition of the Toll-gatherers, are here regulated, by distinctly marking the connection of the trust which one Gate has with another, whereby the traveller is informed of those which are separate, and those which are connected and in receipt of anothers ticket, which it is presumed will be the means of preventing unpleasant altercation.

The public Inns on each route are likewise noticed with a view to utility, as it enables a party to form a meeting with certainty, and gives them a choice of pursuing their pleasures to a greater extent than they otherwise would do.

With the strict attention paid to the object of this publication, in marking the Gentlemen's Seats, explaining the trusts of the different turnpike Gates, adding the number of Inns to each separate route, with other occurring matters which will be found on the face of the work, the proprietor hopes it will prove of that utility to those who may deem it worthy of their purchase to be honored with their attention.
